Dear Parents,

I trust and pray that your family is coping at this trying time. While still to be confirmed, it seems likely that the current COVID lockdown will continue next week, resulting in our school returning to remote learning. Should this occur, the school will write to you by the end of this week to outline arrangements.

The Association of Independent Schools (AIS) has advised schools that the current regulations encourage learning from home; however, schools remain open for families who need to send their children to school.

Our teachers and support staff are working this week. They will invest a considerable amount of time to ensure that they are ready for the start of term. Therefore, I am confident that our students will be cared for and well taught, whether this be face-to-face or remote learning.

Kind regards,

Mr Brett Hartley
Principal
